To Whom It May Concern:

Harbor Branch Oceanographic Institution, Inc. utilized the services of Brownie House Movers in the Fall of 1996 to move a house that had been donated to the institution. The move was a particularly difficult one as it meant transporting the entire house 37 miles up the Indian River lagoon and thereby passing under a total of seven bridges. And, just as the move itself was unique, so also was the house. A multi-level structure, the house appeared to be a series of tiki huts attached to each other. The pressure of time limits were also a factor, as the donor was anxious to have the house moved off the property so he could proceed in building a new residence.

Had it not been for the expertise of Kim Brownie and his crew, Harbor Branch would have had to pass up this highly welcome opportunity to obtain property that would be valuable to the growing institution, now cramped for space.

Long hours of preparation by Kim Brownie and his crew paid off in an event-free move. The frame that was built around the multi-level structure ensured no damage would occur during transport and, most importantly, all time-critical deadlines were met. The professionalism and expertise of Brownie House Movers made the entire venture possible and now, with the house safely delivered to the HBOI complex, Harbor Branch remains highly appreciative of the efforts Kim Brownie and his crew put forth on this venture.

Sincerely,

Jim Leffew
